

SCENES OF 1970 HOMECOMING PARADE

Coin Show Planned In Montgomery

The Seventh Annual Central Alabama Coin Show, one of the South's oldest, moves to a new site in the Capitol City this year. The Oct. 2-3 event will be held for the first time in the new, air-conditioned Montgomery Mall—sprawling shopping center in the Southeastern section of the city, which encompasses some 40 stores.

Sponsors of the annual numismatic event, the Montgomery Coin Club, feel that the Mall location will give browsing coin collectors more comfort, freedom and space, and all reports from similar shows in other areas have been encouraging.

The show, featuring some 35 dealers from all parts of the United States, is held so that collectors may swap, sell, buy or look. The some 15 million collectors in America schedule more than a dozen shows each week throughout the nation. Men, women and children from all walks of life gather to add to Mark Grable, co-chairman their collections, sell what of the annual Montgomery coins they may want to part with, or just look to see what it is all about.

The show is open from 10:00 a.m. until 9:00 p.m., Friday and Saturday, and there is no charge for admission.

The PAT failed. With 25 seconds left on the clock, a host of Elba Tigers dropped Chastain for a 10-yard loss.

Elba travels to Brundidge and the dangerous Randy Wallis, who has completed 34 passes for 345 yards and two TD's this year. He also leads the SAC in the punting department with a 43.1 average.

Brundidge will have to sweat over the Elba defense line, which has shown that it can swamp a passer. This line is backed up by middle line-backer Leavy Boutwell, who leads the conference in both individual tackles and assists. He is also the captain for the Brundidge game will be Skip Rainer and Dennis Bruce.

Wedding Vows Exchanged
In Church Of Christ

Nuptial vows were exchanged at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, September 5, when Miss Laurie Rebecca English and Charles Kenneth Arnold were united in marriage. Rites were performed in the Elba Church of Christ by Pastor Demar Elam.

Nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Kenneth Baker, organist. She accompanied Mrs. Emmet Brunson, who sang "I Love My Sweet Home," "Climb Every Mountain," "The Wedding Prayer," and "Whispering Willows."

The wedding was directed by Mrs. Robert McCall. Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. D. M. English and the groom is the son of Mrs. Harlin Gray, all of Elba. The church altar was flanked by candle trees worked with shades of pink carnations and flat fern. A candelabrum holding pink tapers and fern was located on either side of the altar. Hanging baskets of fern accented the archways along the outside aisle.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Mr. D. M. English. She wore an ivory gown of tulle and lace, and the train was detachable. Her full-length veil of illusion was appliqued with floral patterns of lace and it fell from a matching organza bow. She carried a bouquet of white pom poms, daisies, pink and white roses centered with three philippia orchids. Miss Becky Morrow of Elba attended as maid of honor. Other attendants were Miss Claudia Brock, cousin of the bride, Miss Marilyn Arnold, sister of the groom, and Mrs. Fred Cramton.

They wore formal dresses of pink crepe, designed on princess lines. It featured short puffed sleeves with a low neckline. Pink ribbons were worn around their neck. Their headpieces were large picture hats accented with matching pink ribbon and streamers. They carried pink baskets of light and dark pink carnations, daisies and pink roses.

Raymond Davis, of Florence, attended his nephew as best man. Groomsman were Willie Ray Crocker, Al English, brother of the bride, and Danny Riley, James Carl Brock and Mike Davis served as candle-lighters.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. English wore a mint green and white dress and cost ensemble of broad-cade. Her shoes were dyed to match. The groom's mother wore a light blue dress of changing featuring a lace yoke and sleeves, with matching accessories. Both wore double philippia orchids.

Following the wedding, the bride's parents entertained with a reception in the church fellowship hall. The guests from the receiving line.

The bride and groom were seated in a white cut-worked table with a single pink taper. The table was decorated with a white and pink centerpiece with a mound of pink flowers and two white bouquets. After completing his term of office as Probate Judge of Conecuh County, Judge Costello was appointed to the position of Probate Judge of Conecuh County, Alabama, in September, 1950.

In 1961, Judge Costello was appointed to the position of Probate Judge of Conecuh County, Alabama, in September, 1950.

During Judge Costello's administration of the county, he was represented in the Alabama General Assembly by J. J. Milligan of Geneva, Jeremiah Warren of Clintonville, and H. H. Horn of Victoria. The State Senators were Daniel H. Horn of Clintonville, and W. C. Davis, (address not known). Those were days demanding patriotic service. The question of

Judge Costello Was Devoted County Leader

Pierre Darcy Costello, the second Probate Judge of Conecuh County, Alabama, died on March 22, 1970, near Dublin, Ireland. He died on January 4, 1963, at Murfreesboro, Tennessee. He was the son of Daniel Edmond and Mary Costello. Judge Costello's father died in Ireland, and his mother moved to New York soon after his father's death, and there married a Mr. O'Hara.

Judge Costello lived with his parents in New York until he was 16 years old, and then, on account of family troubles, he left home and came South. He had received a good education in the New York public schools. Leaving New York he went to a Mexican War and was aboard the U.S. vessel, "Porpoise." Afterward he came to Alabama and when he was 19 years old, he was appointed Probate Judge of Conecuh County, to serve from 1849 to 1850.

After completing his term of office as Probate Judge of Conecuh County, he moved to Geneva and later to Elba where he studied law. He was admitted to the bar, but never practiced on account of becoming Probate Judge in September, 1850.

In 1861, Judge Costello organized the Alabama Alabama Infantry regiment in the Confederate Army and was commissioned a captain. He went at once into the war and fought at Corinth, Chilo, in the Mississippi, and Kentucky campaigns at Perryville, and at Murfreesboro. He was wounded at Murfreesboro on January 1, 1863. Judge Costello did not run for election in May, 1862, having left off the duties of Probate Judge for active service in the Confederate Army.

Politically Judge Costello was a Whig. He was married on December 18, 1855, to Miss Cordelia Ann Lee, daughter of Charles Stephens and Elizabeth Mary Lee. Both of her parents were natives of Georgia, and her father served in the Indian Wars where he gained the title of Colonel.

Judge Costello was the first Probate Judge of Conecuh County who was a lawyer. Entering upon his duties as Probate Judge, Judge Costello put his shoulder to the wheel and contributed able service in building the new county, giving base and pillar to a strong county government. The county had no poor house. Judge Costello secured land and had the first poor house of Conecuh County built. It was located about one mile east of Elba, north of the Elba-Enterprise Highway. This poor house was operated until after his death and during Judge Costello's administration.

In those days the county did not undertake any great work or expensive improvements. The county government was concerned mainly with building and maintaining bridges across the principal streams of the county, and ferries at some points on the Elba River, one being located at Elba, and known as Benton's Ferry. In those days the county was sparsely settled, many sections being only "haid pinoy woods." Settlements were made mainly along the larger streams in the county.

During Judge Costello's administration the county was represented in the Alabama General Assembly by J. J. Milligan of Geneva, Jeremiah Warren of Clintonville, and H. H. Horn of Victoria. The State Senators were Daniel H. Horn of Clintonville, and W. C. Davis, (address not known). Those were days demanding patriotic service. The question of Judge Costello was a leader of men in this time of distress. No man was more jealous for the cause of the Confederacy than he.

During the Civil War, while Judge Costello was at the front leading his men as the able champion of the rights of the southern states, he kept insympathetic touch with his people at home. With the faithful cooperation of his county commissioners, great work was accomplished in caring for the poor. Indigent husbands and fathers, sons and brothers had cheerfully gone into the bloody conflict, many in Company K with their beloved Probate Judge commanding the 25th Alabama Infantry.

Back at home whole families were on the verge of starvation. There was destitution on every hand. These could not be cared for as in times of peace. The county commissioners organized every one of the 15 beats of the county for the purpose of effectively caring for the indigent families of the men who had gone to the war. During the latter months of Judge Costello's term of office the county administration was engaged mainly in relieving the financial distress brought on by the war condition.

On New Year's day 1863, Judge Costello received a mortal wound in the battle on Murfreesboro. He died in a nearby residence on January 4th and was buried on the battle field. No monument marks his resting place.

Judge P. D. Costello paid the supreme sacrifice for the county he loved.

Washington Report

by
GEORGE ANDREWS

Member of Congress
Third District of Ala.

In the wake of Justice Department attacks on public schools in the South, last week called on Attorney General John Mitchell to take legal action against school districts outside the South which are practicing segregation, but getting off the hook completely.

The following are excerpts from my letter to the Attorney General: The time has come for the Justice Department to expand its activities in the field of public school desegregation to other states and other school systems outside the South.

"Now that public education in the South has been reduced to a mass of abandoned and half-empty schools, it is time to take this experiment to other areas where segregation is conveniently preserved through neighborhood patterns and, more importantly, through the absence of any pressure from the Departments of Justice and Health, Education and Welfare.

"In reality, of course, there is no legal justification for basing to achieve racial balance in any public school in any part of the nation. The prohibition against such action has been clearly and emphatically stated by Congress in the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965, and the HEW Appropriations Bill for Fiscal Year 1969.

"However, if the Justice Department is determined to send its lawyers into Southern school districts to ascertain that teachers are forced to violate their contracts, children are herded about like cattle, and local school boards and administrators are rendered helpless to make their own decisions, then that same Justice Department should do likewise in other sections of the country.

"Your department has ample justification for legal action in other states, notably New York, Illinois, Ohio, Wisconsin, Missouri, and Indiana.

"I bring to your attention the official records of the Department of HEW, which show that the District of Columbia public schools are 9.9 percent integrated; Chicago, Ill., 3.2 percent integrated; Gary, Ind., 3.1 percent; St. Louis, Mo., 7.1 percent; New York City, 7.1 percent; Cincinnati, Ohio, 22.3 percent; and Milwaukee, Wis., 18.5 percent.

"Both Mobile, Ala., and Atlanta, Ga., have higher percentages of desegregation than Gary or Chicago. Yet, this very fall, the Mobile public schools have been the target of massive desegregation efforts by agencies of the Federal Government, while Mayor Daley's Chicago and its 3.2 percent effort has been virtually untouched.

"I am aware that the Department of HEW has sought to justify its actions against Southern school districts on grounds that these systems are the result of 'de jure' segregation, rather than 'de facto' segregation, which presumably protects systems outside the South from harassment.

"This supposition is pure myth and a flagrant ment and transportation of pupils by school officials and by the courts for the purpose of overcoming racial imbalance in the schools.

"Even if there were grounds for the de facto de jure distinction, the states of New York, California, Illinois, Indiana, New Jersey, and Ohio would fit the de jure classification as surely as any of the Southern states concerned.

"For example, Indiana states authorized separate but equal public schools until 1940, while New Jersey allowed separate schools for Negroes, white, and Chinese.

"My purpose in bringing relevant facts regarding the public school situation in non-Southern states to your attention is to demonstrate the shameful discrimination in the administration of justice afforded by the Department of Justice to act on these Southern states and their respective public school systems.

"The facts about segregation outside the South are equally as disturbing as the facts about segregation in the South. It is time for the Department of Justice to act on these Southern states and their respective public school systems.

Sharon Weeks Named Miss Kinston

The annual Miss Kinston contest was held last Thursday night in the Kinston High Auditorium before a full house.

Named Miss Kinston for 1970-71 was Miss Sharon Weeks, 17 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bud Weeks of Rt. 2, Kinston, King.

She is 5 feet, 6 inches tall, Miss Weeks has light brown hair and green eyes. She weighs 122 pounds. Her favorite hobby is reading and she hopes to be a model when she finishes school.

First runner-up was Miss Joe Ann Jones, also seventeen and a senior at Kinston. She has long brown hair and brown eyes.

Holliman To Speak In Elba Tuesday

Guest speaker at the Elba Quarterback Club next week will be Ray Holliman, Sports writer of the Alabama Journal.

The meeting will be held Tuesday night, October 13, at the Elba Country Club. The meeting begins at 7:30 p.m. according to Quarterback Tommy Wise.

The first announcement of the location of this industry in Elba was April 24, 1969, when city officials, state officials and bond salesmen began work with the J. B. Kleinert Rubber Company of New York.

Following the meeting with Jack Briner, chairman of the Board of Directors of the Kleinert's Rubber Company, of New York, made a trip to Elba May 21 to complete plans for coming to Elba.

On Wednesday, May 21, Mayor Jack Brinson and John Stephens signed papers signaling the go-ahead of the training plant for workers to be employed by the multi-million dollar plant in Elba.

The first of October, 1969, Governor Albert Brewer officially announced that one of the nation's foremost garment manufacturers, the Kleinert's, Inc., would build a $3 million plant in Elba, joining the Governor in announcing the new industry was Elba's Mayor Jack Brinson, and John Stephens, President of the Kleinert's Company.

In a picture carried in The Elba Clipper, October 2, 1969, was the Governor, Mr. Stephens, Mayor Brinson, Alvin Dorsky of New York, attorney for Kleinert's, Inc., Drexel Cook, Coffee County member House of Representatives, and John Gandy, Montgomery architect, who designed the new plant.

Governor Brewer called the announcement, one of the finest industrial achievements of 1969, for the State of Alabama. Governor Brewer said, "I congratulate the officials of Kleinert's on the decision to locate in Alabama and in Elba."

The plant is now employing approximately 500 sewing machine operators and administrative personnel. Company officials say they expect to be providing jobs for nearly 2,000 workers by 1972, when the payroll will be over $6 million. It is expected that around 1,000 employees will be on the payroll by early 1971.

According to Collier, their fears regarding the slowdown were very real and the general economy since May has proved to be even worse than they had anticipated. According to Collier, information furnished to the Bureau of Census showed that production for the entire trailer industry for the month of June reached a new low for 1970, then production fell more than 25% below 1969.

The President of Pruehauf Trailer Company, which is the largest trailer manufacturer in the world, stated on August 31st that his firm felt the total units produced for the year would be about 65% of last year's total.

Collier stated Friday afternoon, "We have used every means available to maintain our full work force, including the manufacture of stock trailers and working on a four-day week during the month of September. Because of the continuing lag in orders received and in order to protect our stockholder's investment, we are again forced to reduce our managerial, technical, clerical and production staff." He continued with, "I am sure all of you are aware that the trailer industry is not the only industry hit hard by the decline in the economy. Most of you know about the reduction in force announced."
